Thursday, May 19

11:30am – 12:00 pm Welcome, Introductions of participants and CBASS partners
Location: TBD

The Collaborative for Building After-School Systems (CBASS) is, “a partnership dedicated to increasing the availability of quality after-school programming by building citywide after-school system.” With nine groups representing eight major American cities, CBASS has built a strong coalition of national afterschool leaders who share best practices and innovative strategies in the afterschool arena.

12:00pm – 1:00pm Overview of TASC and ELT model (and lunch)
Location: TBD
Speaker: Lucy Friedman, Executive Director, TASC

The trip will begin with an overview with leaders of The After-School Corporation discussing the Expanded Learning Time model currently used in 17 public schools in New York City. The session will include an overview of the initiative, how it was developed and implemented, how data is being collected and used to gauge effectiveness and improve program quality, and the implications of lessons learned on federal policy.

TASC Expanded Learning Time is a city-wide network of 17 public elementary and middle schools that are expanding the school day by three hours with the support and leadership of The After-School Corporation. Each school partners with a community organization, such as a settlement house, to expand learning time by at least 35 percent—more than 60 extra days of school each year—at 10 percent of the cost of the school day. TASC's model builds on research-tested school and after-school partnerships that have been shown to demonstrably improve students' achievement, attendance, their intellectual and creative development and their motivation to succeed.

TASC manages the project, which launched in the 2008-09 school year, in partnership with the New York City Department of Education (NYC DOE) and the Department of Youth and Community Development (DYCD). Each school partners with a community organization to expand learning time to 6 PM every day school is in session. Students get more time for academic instruction and support, as well as diverse enrichments and sports. Teachers work side-by-side with community organization under the leadership of the principal, who assures that activities after 3 PM are connected to the school day.
